D. H. GAINES AND HIS YOUNG BRIDE ARE RUNAWAYS

of the Well-Known Candy Family.

Word reached New York to-day of the elopement from Erie, Pa., last tisement rend, and there was a fine Wednesday of Miss Florence Steuber, portrait of "Miss Anita Rio, soprano," laughter of Louis Steuber, the mill- slong with the announcement, fectioner, of No. 160 West Fifty-ninth 53 East Fifty-sixth street." street. ment and consternation.

Gaines is a first cousin of the present generation of Huylers. He is twenty-nine years old and a graduate of Yale. He is a member of the New York Athietic and New York Yacht Crubs, and an altogether well set up and well liked young man in his set. His father. Thomas J. Gaines, st., is an insurance adjuster at No. 76 William street.

The young man's parents to an Evening World reporter denied the marriage, but his namesake, David Huyler, at luncheon in the Everett House, was more communicative.

"Of course, it is true," said Mr. Huyler, "and I want to say that Miss Streuber is an exceedingly Jucky girl, for my cousin is a very fine char, indeed. No zooner was the ceremony over than they sent me a telegram, although I have never met the bride.
